

Reflection Questions

After you've read all three poems, choose one poem and answer the following questions. There are no wrong answers; these questions are just meant to get you thinking more deeply about Reginald Dwayne Betts' writing.

Title of Poem: _____

1. A poem often has a what and a so-what: The what is the event, such as the narrator in "I'm Learning Nothing This Night" reading a magazine. The so-what is the reason why that event matters to the reader—the deeper, universal message of the poem. What do you think the so-what of your chosen poem is?
2. Look back at the words and phrases that you took note of. Why did they stand out to you? What stuck out to you? How did these words and phrases support the overall meaning and tone (vibe) of the poem?
3. How would the story of these moments read differently if they weren't poems? For example, if "Prison" were an essay, what do you think would be lost or gained?

Documenting Moments

For 2–4 days, document the moments in your day-to-day life that get you thinking and wondering. In the chart, write a summary of each moment and what you were thinking and feeling.
