

99 WRITING

Cloud vs. Wind

by Daphne, 826
Valencia

TYPE
NARRATIVE

One weird day, a girl named Chloe was walking to her school, Brooklyn High School. Then wind blew her away into the clouds. Chloe didn't know where she was. She was trying to call her mom but she forgot she left her phone at her house. She tried to scream, but no one heard her. Then she saw the God of Clouds. The God of Clouds said, "You have the power of the cloud lover."

"Who are you?" said Chloe.

"I am the God of Clouds," he said.

When the God of Clouds told her the super powers she had, she was surprised and still a little bit confused. After that, the God of Clouds carried her down, all the way to her school. In her class she acted like nothing interesting had happened before school.

Then Chloe met with her friends and they asked her why she came late. The only thing she said was, "I went to the library and I lost track of time." She wanted to keep her powers a secret, so that's why she lied. She was really sad that she couldn't tell her friends that she had super powers.

At night she heard on the news that a huge hurricane was coming in ten minutes. She started to elevate, and put on her own superhero costume. The costume was kind of like Wonder Woman's costume, but white and sky blue. She went outside to see if there was actually a hurricane, and then she split it in half. She saw that inside there was a villain called Ms. Weather Ruiner.

"Well, well, well, look who it is, Fluffy Justice!" said Ms. Weather Ruiner.

"How do you know my name?" said Fluffy Justice.

Instead of answering, they got into a big fight. "What are you doing, Ms. Weather Ruiner?" asked Fluffy Justice.

"I'm trying to chop the clouds into two pieces." said Ms. Weather Ruiner.

"You are so mean to the clouds!" said Fluffy Justice.

"No I'm not, they are always following me!"

"There's only one way to solve this problem: a war of hypnosis! The rules of this game are that we try to hypnotize each other. Ready, set, go!"

And Fluffy Justice won.