This Is Me

by Lucas Hu, 826 Boston

TYPEPOETRY*GENRE*GRADES 9–12

Chinese descent is bestowed upon me at birth.
Parents solemn enough to travel for better opportunities.
I dwell in their hardship of coming to the land of dreams.
Despite being in great depth of poverty.
In this new mysterious land
Confused by everything and its native language
I disguised myself in different categories of people
Gaining new knowledge of the world
I dreamt of becoming a software engineer to this society
Upon setting my foot on this road
I know there will be obstacles obstructing my goals.
Rebirth like a phoenix but with Chinese descent
I carry my roots on my shoulders
People perceive me as just another Asian from what they've heard.
These rumors are just a false illusion toward me.
In the interior, others would perceive me considerably as intelligent and mute
Like a predator slowly approaching its prey.
I pale in comparison to others who are more hardworking.
In reality, I am hidden in my home
Maneuvering whatever I need to do 24/7
Technology accompanies me wherever I go
Staying and helping me when I achieve my dream.
Technology corresponds with how my life and career will go.
This is me and my profound technology as it guides me.

La tecnología me transforma, me inspira, y me motiva.

Tecnología me ayuda a ser quien yo soy
